

AFE SIGNS EXCLUSIVE GOLD COIN DISTRIBUTION AGREEMENT WITH JWS INC.

RELEASE DATE : July 5TH, AD2007

In March 2007 AFE reached a heads of agreement with the collectable precious metals distribution company, JWS Inc.

"This distribution agreement is very strategic, not just for AFE, but also importantly, for its global client and customer network," said AFE director Howard Flaherty earlier this week.

Internationally based Joseph Wealth Systems (JWS) is scheduled to launch its 2007 Joseph Coin and distribution structure later this year. In June, directors of AFE and JWS met in Zurich to advance its release and JWS distribution arrangements.

"One of the greatest strengths of AFE's coinage range has always been its privacy and legal standing", comments Philip Judge. "Their 'non-legal-tender' status means they are exempt from national currency and coinage laws. By acquiring these coins, you become the owner, not just the bearer." (a)

"This falls in line perfectly with JWS's mandate and message to provide means for people to become committed savers in tangible assets, while diversifying their income streams," adds AFE's Simon Heapes.

(a) Under the Currency and Coinage Acts of most nations, the issuing governments always retain legal ownership of their coinage. The holders of the coins are only ever the 'bearers' never the owners. This equally applies to government issued bullion coinage where typically the face value of the coin is considerably below the precious metal value of the coin.
